Ski Runners of the Canadian Rockies

With a field of activity unequalled the world over the new winter sports association the Ski Runners of the Canadian Rockies, is rapidly coming into prominence among skiers and winter sports enthusiasts generally. The new organization is patterned largely after the famous Tatra Riders and its locale, unquestioned for scenery and facilities on the continent and probably without a rival even in Europe, is Banff in the heart of the Rockies, with runs and trails varying from one to ten days in duration and covering such world-known objectives as Mount Assiniboine, Simpson Pass, Shadow Lake, Lake Louise, Ptarmigan Valley and Yase, Bow Lakes and Pictograph Pass. This winter season the passes in full swing as late as June when visitors are enjoying golf and tennis, fishing and hiking, in the valleys below. From the sport begins in November each year.

A thousand feet above Banff and about an hour out from the town is the ski lodge and the ski run on the pass between Mount Norquay and Stony Squaw. From the club house runs radiate in all directions with cables and sleds at strategic points for rest and refreshment. There is a 10-metre jump at Buffalo and every year in February (this year February 1-14) a tournament is held where the pick of Canadian and outside skiers compete.

Lay-out shows (1) Ski track across virgin snow with Mt. Assiniboine, 11,000 feet high, in background; (2) Canadian Pacific Bungalow Camp at Mager headquarters for skiing at Mt. Assiniboine; (3) Mount Norquay Ski Lodge, 1000 feet above Banff, overlooking the Bow River, with dog team in foreground; (4) The Towers, on Dundas Pass, near Mt. Assiniboine, one of the finest winter scenes in the Rockies.

BETTER BRITISH

The British made talking picture, "PATRY" and "Michael," has been brought to the attention of the large American motion picture corporations. The fact that this picture was the subject of special efforts by several American companies to obtain the rights for United States release, and the acclaim of critics on this side of the Atlantic that it is the equal of the best American picture, is an indication of how far the British picture industry has advanced during the past year.

A few years ago the British picture was rated as poor in direction, photography, and in other features. The British picture producers were, adopted the newest and best mechanical equipment, hired expert directors, and today their pictures are classed with the best.

WAR PLANES FOR BELGIUM

A British aircraft firm has obtained a million and a half dollar contract for supplying fifty military airplanes to Belgium.

Just another indication that every country in the world is making preparations for war, and if events continue they will get it.

But perhaps poor little Belgium can hardly believe that only a few years ago the iron-robed heel of the invader marched across Belgium, raising her towns and cities, tearing her farms and fields, destroying her beauty spots, and bringing death and anguish to her people. Today the great nations are building more battleships, fleets of powerful fighting planes, and spending more money on war than ever before. Belgium is just trying to keep pace.

GETTING BY THIS WINTER

The winter which a few months ago we faced with fear and misgivings, is half over.

People are making shift with old clothes and the plainest of food; the destitute are being helped by the generosity of the more fortunate, and everybody is managing to get by somehow.

Your true winterer is nothing if not a most adaptable person, capable of making his way through it. In truth, a hard winter, and following on the heels of two poor crop years, has made some farmers find themselves pretty well up against it, and business men are suffering in proportion.

There is no consolation in the thought that people in other districts and in other parts of the world are suffering similar effects of the depression. That does not make it any easier for us; it does not help us out of our troubles. There is satisfaction, however, in knowing that the winter we dreaded to be half over, and that spring is approaching.

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW

Into the silent places
The Old Year goes tonight,
Heaving new pain and sadness,
Old care and old delight,
Mistaken and false and false,
The things that could not last—
But taught that 'er was truly ours
Goes with him to the past.

Out of the silent places
The Young Year comes tonight,
Bright and new and new and new,
New care and new delight,
Go forth and meet him bravely,
The New Year all untired,
The things the Old Year left with us,
Faith, hope, and love—
—Annie Johnson Flint

FOR A CHILD BORN AT DAWN

In this strange hour of dying stars,
Which breaks upon the slow earth
With no sound
Of howling wind, in this place
Where the night
Merges with day and on the shadowy ground.
The wild grass bends beneath its weight of dew.
I give you dawn and darkness: they are for you.

Never the full and blinding noon will thunder
Its storm of fire upon your eyes;
Nor star,
Set on the gulf of midnight, strike
Your sin and drowsy heart. Where dim things are,
You will follow shadow and sunlight,
By the bird, by the ghost of love,
By the moon.

ALBERTA FARMERS PROTEST

PHILIPS GASOLINE, OIL

ALLEGING THAT the amount of gasoline to be sold in the province is not satisfactory, a resolution from Stettin Petroleum Co. will be presented to the annual meeting of the United Farmers of Alberta, to be held in Calgary, January 13-23, urging the guaranteed, the lease of new licenses for the sale of gasoline in the province.

Last year the license fees paid were $1.00 per gallon, but this year owners who had paid $1.00 in the season at the old rate to the new season at the new rate.

A similar increase to that now being made in Alberta has already been announced by Saskatchewan, while in British Columbia, it is pointed out, the license fees are considerably higher than those in this province, even with the 1932 increase.

Premier Brodie said that other possible methods of providing more revenue from the motor traffic have been considered but have not been found practicable.

"The government realizes," he says, "that there is a widespread feeling that as the increase in the gas tax would be a more equitable means of raising revenue from motor vehicles, but this source of revenue has been largely because of the manufacture and sale of various types of cars, and presumably for other purposes, but which are undoubtedly being largely used for pleasure and motor vehicles through the province."

This has been the subject of considerable study, but extensive amendments to the Gas Tax Act will probably be necessary to meet this situation.

THEIR LEAVES ON

VANCOUVER, Jan. 4. (C.P.)—Herman Trele, Wembley, Alberta, being king, sailed Saturday on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Canada for Honolulu and the Far East.

Accompanied by Mrs. Trele, is making a round trip to Manila in the Empress of Canada, the director of a strenuous exhibition season.

LEGISLATION LIKELY

TO OPEN IN LAST WEEK OF JANUARY

Session of the Alberta legislature is likely to open during the last week of January. The U. F. A. annual convention, according to several U. F. A. members of the legislature, will be held in southern constituencies during the last week of January.

Legislation for the coming session was discussed at the annual convention, and it was expected that the legislature would make up the conference to which it was summoned during the last week in the capital.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Jan. 4. (C.P.)—Plowing has started in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, and several plows have been out. The weather gradually became milder and the few inches of snow fell on New Year's Day rapidly disappeared.

A farmer reported that his plow had had enough nap to make a trip.

JAPAN GENERAL LEADS

TROOPS INTO CHINCHOW

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Jan. 3.—Japanese troops commanded by Gen. Jiro Tanaka entered Chinchow today and may press forward to the Great Wall. The Japanese entered the only remaining stronghold in Manchuria, the forces of Marshal Chang Hsueh-shan, and withdrew.

The plans of the Japanese after taking Chinchow were not clear, but there appeared little doubt that they would press on to the Great Wall of China unless a "bandit menace," against which they campaigned, was not checked.

It has been the announced intention of the Japanese command to drive all Chinese forces out of Manchuria.

AUSTRALIA'S '32 CROP

CROP OUTLOOK OBSCURE

Varying Factors Create Numerous Local Conditions
SYDNEY, N.E.W., Jan. 4.—Yield of the Australian wheat crop is expected to be extremely variable in different districts this season, and this is due to a wide variety of conditions.

Frost damage, the prevalence of late frosts and the late season of the year are factors in the situation.

For reasons of economy—to avoid the use of superphosphate, and to reduce the cost of work—many crops were sown very early, and unfortunately early and early mid-season varieties are now in excess planted out of season. As it is impossible to check growth by reeding-off with sheep on account of the softened condition of the soil during the winter, they have come into ear too early, and frost has done much damage.

In the famous Gulgunda district the wheat is now in the early stages. One storm of rain over 50 miles wide and it could be traced for more than 100 miles. The crops on some farms were entirely destroyed, the wheat being left in the ground, and the wheat plants a few inches from the ground.

Although they had been roughly harvested with a binder, the wheat of crop completely wiped out by the storm.

The wheat crop in the Gulgunda district is estimated to be worth $14,000 and 15,000 acres, in which 50 farmers were concerned.

DISHES THIMBLING

New timblings for fish include silver-fish, basses, rhinoceros, and other fish. The fishery and touches of silver-fish.

ALLEGING THAT THE AMOUNT OF GASOLINE TO BE SOLD IN THE PROVINCE IS NOT SATISFACTORY, A RESOLUTION FROM STETTIN PETROLEUM CO. WILL BE PRESENTED TO THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE UNITED FARMERS OF ALBERTA, TO BE HELD IN CALGARY, JANUARY 13-23, URGING THE GUARANTEED, THE LEASE OF NEW LICENSES FOR THE SALE OF GASOLINE IN THE PROVINCE.

MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ELLEN'S INSTALLMENT
She spoke, Horace Johnson (who tells the story), his wife, old Mrs. Dane, Herbert Robinson and his sister Alice, and Dr. Sperry, friends and neighbors, are in the habit of holding weekly meetings.

At a second session, Miss Jersey adds details about a summer resort where Charles Ellingham was known to have been at the same time that Mrs. Wells was there. She also speaks of a pocketbook containing which contained some important car tickets and letters. Mrs. Dane alone of the women, seems thrilled by the investigation.

Johnson and Sperry do some detective work and uncover the fact that somebody with fully acknowledged has made away with some letters, Hawkins the butler is suspected as well as Ellingham, a friend of Mrs. Wells, of knowing who the slayer is. The investigation has reached its final stages.

New Go On With the Story
"Don't beat about the bush. We know you have the letters. And we want them."

"I don't intend to give you them."

"Will you tell us how you got them?"

He hesitated. "If you do not know already, I do not care to say."

I placed the letter to him. "You wrote this, I think?"

"I was genuinely startled. More than that, indeed, for his face twitched. 'Suppose I did?' he said. 'I'm not admitting it.'"

"Will you tell us for whom it was meant?"

"You know a great deal already, gentlemen. Why not find out from whom you learned the letter?"

"You know, then, where we learned what we know?"

"That's easy," he said bitterly. "She told you enough, I daresay. She doesn't know it all, of course. Any more than I do," he added.

"Will you give us the letters?"

"I haven't said I have them. I haven't admitted I wrote that one on the desk. Suppose I say that I'll not give them up except to the District Attorney?"

"By 'that' do you refer to Miss Jersey's letter?"

He stared, and smiled faintly. "You know who I mean."

"We tried to assure him that we were not in a sense, seeking to involve him in the matter, and I even went so far as to state our position briefly."

"I'd better explain, Hawkins. We are not doing police work. But, owing to a chain of circumstances, we have learned that Mr. Wells did not kill himself. He was murdered, or at least shot, by some one else. It may not have been deliberate. Owing to what we have learned, certain people are under suspicion. We want to do things up for our own satisfaction."

"Then why is some one taking down what I say in the text room?"

He could only have guessed it, for he saw that he was right by his face. He smiled bitterly. "Go on," he said. "Take it down. I don't care."

"I don't hurt anybody. I don't know who did it, and that's God's truth. And after long wrangling, that was as far as we got."

He suspected who had done it, but he did not know. He absolutely refused to surrender the letters in his possession, and a sense of decency, I think, kept us all from pressing the question of the A. S. matter.

"That's a personal affair," he said. "I've had a good bit of trouble. I'm thinking now of going back to England."

And as I say, we did not insist. When he had gone there seemed to be nothing to say. He had left the same impression on us all. I think of them, but not of crime.

Of a man fairly driven, of wretchedness that was almost despair. He still had letters. He had after all, as much right to them as we had. Which was, actually, no right at all. And, whatever it was, he still had his secret.

Herbert was almost childishly crestfallen. Sperry's attitude was that of a man who had been deceived.

"A woman, of course," he said. "The letter shows it. He tried to get her back, perhaps, by holding the letters over her head. And it had worked out. Poor devil! Only—who is the woman?"

"That night, the fifteenth day after the crime, that the solution came. It came as a matter of course."

I was in the library, reading, or trying to read, a rather abstract book on psychic phenomena. My wife, I recall, had just asked me to change a banjo record for "The End of a Pleasant Day," when the bell rang.

In our modest establishment the maid came early and it is my custom, on those rare occasions when we have guests after nine o'clock, to answer the door myself.

To my surprise it was Sperry, accompanied by two ladies, one of them heavily veiled. It was not until they entered the reception room and lit the gas that I saw who they were. It was Ellnor Wells, in deep mourning, and Clara, Mrs. Dane's companion and secretary.

While I am quite sure that I was not thinking clearly at the opening of the interview, I know that I was conscious of the presence of Mrs. Dane's secretary, but I doubtless accepted it as having some connection with Clara's notes. And Sperry made no comment on her at all.

"Mr. Wells suggested that we come here, Horace," he began. "We may need a legal mind in this. I'm not sure, or rather I think it unlikely. But just in case—suppose you tell them, Ellnor."

I have no record of the story Ellnor told that night in our little reception-room, with Clara sitting in a corner, grave and white-faced, as was fragmentary, incoherent.

But I got it all at last. Charles Ellingham had killed Arthur Wells, but in a struggle. In parts the story was world-wide, but he did not spare himself, or her motives. She had wanted luxury, and Arthur had not succeeded as she had promised. They were in debt, and living beyond their means. And when she hastened to add, would not have mattered, had he not been brutal with her. He had made her life very wretched.

That room the subject of Charles Ellingham was so emphatic, she knew that there had been talk, but there had been no real basis for it. She had turned to him for comfort, and he gave her love. She didn't know where he was now, and didn't greatly care, but she would like to recover and destroy some letters he had written her.

She was looking crushed and ill, and she told her story nervously. Reduced to its elements, it was as follows:

On the night of Arthur Wells' death they were dressing for a ball. She had made a private arrangement with Ellingham to send a headache at the last moment and let Arthur go alone. But he had not consented that she had been forced to go, after all. She had sent the governess, Suzanne, to get the headache, but he was not at his home. A message was left with his valet. As it turned out, he had already started. Ellnor was dressed all but her hair-bow and she had put on a negligee to wait for our ever-ready return and help her. Arthur was in his dressing room, and she saw him grumbling about having no blazer for his safety razor.

He got out a set of razors and searched for the strap. When she remembered where it was, she found it was too late. The letters had been hidden in the dressing room, and toward her, with them in his hand. She was terrified. He had read only one, but that was enough. He muttered something and turned it over. She saw he had a revolver toward where the revolver had been hidden from the children, and she screamed.

Charles Ellingham heard her. The door had been left unlocked, and the governess, and he was in the lower hall. He rushed toward the door, but he was too late. The first shot was fired by Arthur. It struck the ceiling. The second was doubtful about. She thought the revolver was still in the dressing room, and she hurriedly went out to see.

He went down like a stone, in his own dressing room.

They were alone, and two of them. They had dragged the body in, and then they faced each other. Ellingham was for calling the police, and she was for calling the police, but she had kept him away from the telephone. She maintained, and I think it very possible, that her whole thought was for the children, and she was for calling the police, but she had kept him away from the telephone.
